SAID HE WOULD SHOOT THE AGENT

Drunken Man Acted in a Boisterous Manner at the Traction Station

SCARED YOUNG LADY

And When Ordered Away by Amos Baxter, went to his Hip Pocket for a Gun

"Come over to the traction office at once; there's a man here who threatened to shoot me when I ordered him away from here after he had insulted a lady," was the startling word received by City Marshal Price Saturday night about midnight just as he was ready to retire at the Windsor hotel.

With due haste the officer hurried to the traction station and there he found the night agent, Amos Baxter on the verge of collapse. He had a large gun in his coat pocket and was pacing up and down in front of the station, but the midnight disturber who created all the excitement had made a hasty get-away up the street.

The young lady in the station, who was a passenger bound for Indianapolis, said that the fellow came to the window repeatedly and tried to attract her attention. After he had annoyed her for some time she reported the matter to the agent. Coming out in front the agent told the fellow he must not only refrain from such actions, but he must leave at once. The would-be fresh young man, who was a little worse off from too much liquor, responded that he could take care of his affairs, and mumbling something about shooting the agent, reached to his hip pocket as if to draw a gun. Baxter stood his ground, and repeated later in a respectable manner when he phoned the officer. It is said that the fellow's name was John Rucker, and that he had been drinking heavily all evening and was "carrying on" in several places in a boisterous manner.

CAME NORTH TO BUY SOME MACHINERY

To be Used in the Construction of the Florida East Coast Railroad

Mr. and Mr. Joseph C. Meredith, of Miami, Florida, came Sunday on a business trip and to visit the Meredith families and other relatives in this city. They left this afternoon for Indianapolis to visit Mrs. Meredith's brother, and from there they will go to Cincinnati, where Mrs. Meredith will visit friends while her husband continues his trip through to Cleveland, Pittsburgh and other eastern points.

Mr. Meredith is chief assistant engineer on the Florida East Coast railroad which is being built out into the water off the coast of Florida, which is considered one of the most marvelous undertakings in history. He came north to purchase new grading machinery for this work.

MANILLA MAN FILES MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

Shelbyville Republican: William Shepherd, of Manilla, who was recently tried on the charge of criminal assault on little Pearl Ingermeier, of Fountaintown, and who was found guilty, fined $1000 and sent to jail for 180 days, has, through his attorney, made a motion for a new trial.

FINGER CRUSHED OFF UNDER HEAVY IRON SAFE

Elisha Williams Suffers Painful Injury which will Hinder him from Working

Elisha Williams met with a very painful accident this morning while assisting in installing a large iron safe in Walter E. Smith's office in the Miller law building.

The young man got his hand caught under the edge of the heavy safe and it came down upon it, crushing the end of the little finger off. Mr. Williams hurried to a physician and the finger was dressed.

SILVER CORD IS LOOSENEO

And Angels Bear Aged Pioneer to Home Beyond the Skies

SUFFERED TWO YEARS

George Oliver Succumbs Sunday Afternoon at His Home in This City

After two years of suffering, George Oliver, familiarly known to his friends as "Uncle George," passed beyond this vale of tears at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at his late residence in West Second street, at the advanced age of 82 years, 5 months and 10 days.

Mr. Oliver was a pioneer of Rush county, having lived here for eighty years. He was born in Kentucky in October, 1828, and was brought to this country when he was two years of age.

Deceased was the son of John and Jane Mahin Oliver, and was one of a family of fifteen children. In December, 1856, he was united in marriage to Mary J. Bean. It is a singular coincidence that his beloved wife preceded him to the other shore just nine years to a day, she having died just nine years ago yesterday.

Mr. Oliver was well known because of his manly character and gentle disposition. He was a good father, a kind husband and a true friend and in losing him, the county lost one of her best citizens, who helped to nurse her in her infancy and who watched her with interest as she grew into one of the leading counties of the State.

Mr. Oliver is survived by three children, Mrs. Belle Cosand, of this city; Mrs. Alice McCoy, of Anderson, and William Oliver, of Indianapolis; also one sister Mrs. Martha Morris, of this city.

The funeral services will be held at the late residence at 427 West Second street, at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Dr. V. W. Tevis. The remains will be laid to rest in East Hill cemetery.

OFFICER HAD TO USE HIS CLUB ON DRUNK

Umbrella Mender Put up a Fight when Placed Under Arrest Saturday Night

Late Saturday night, Officer Pea had an experience with two umbrella menders at the corner of Harrison and Third streets. Both were intoxicated and when the officer started to place them under arrest one of the "mush-fakes" showed fight and Policeman Pea was obliged to use his big stick on him. They were released Sunday and ordered out of town.

BABY CROP NOT ENCOURAGING

There were not so Many Reported for Month of February

NOT TWINS OR COLORED ONES

In the Bunch of Little Darlings Girls Outnumber Boys this Time

The baby crop in Rush county for the month of February is not quite so encouraging as it has been in previous months, possibly it is due to the fact that this is the shortest month in the year. Another noticeable fact in the County Board of Health clerk's report is that there were no twins nor any colored children reported during the month.

Nineteen little darlings have been reported to Dr. Frank Green and it may be that some have as yet not been reported. Of the nineteen babies for the month the girls have the lead, there being nine boys and ten girls.

Many pretty names appear this month, and no two names are alike.

The following is the list as reported to the local secretary and any others who have not been reported, please report to Dr. Frank Green at once.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Short, not named; Mr. and Mrs. Grant Taylor, Edith A.; Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Rabb, Margaret B.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur George, Cecil; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilbert, Beatrice; Mr. and Mrs. William D. Lewis, Russell; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dawson, George; Mr. and Mrs. William Clark, William E.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Boring, Rex; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond O. Power, Gladys O.; Mr. and Mrs. George Woods, Bertha; Mr. and Mrs. S. J. McClure, not named; Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Offutt, Leland P.; Mr. and Mrs. Closson D. Macey, Lowell; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Drennen, Pauline; Mr. and Mrs. William Woodroof; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Overleese, Harold D.; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert McClain, Geneva.

These names do not include the babies born in the cities of Rushville and Carthage.

LUSTILY LUNGED BOYS WILL BE THE BIG CRASH

A large crowd of lustily-lunged ex-football players of the old Rushville high school teams will furnish their share of the noise at the State convention. They will leave here in a body. The gang is now rehearsing a Watson yell.

George F. Mull of Indianapolis, brother of the "Rush County Mulls," who was appointed receiver for the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line company, denies that there was a conspiracy formed to purposely throw the road into the hands of a receiver.

Make no other arrangements but to go to Indianapolis Thursday. As many special cars as needed will be pressed into service on the I. & C. line Thursday morning, the first Watson Special leaving at 6:30 a. m. running through on limited time. Watson Badges, Convention Tickets and American Beauty Roses will be distributed here at the Traction Station to passengers on the Special Cars.

Rush county should send at least 3000 to boost and root for her Favorite Son.

ALL ABOARD FOR INDIANAPOLIS

Everybody Going to the State Convention Thursday to Shout Watson

VARIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

Are Being Formed Among Local Enthusiasts—Rush County will send Large Delegation

Traffic Manager George Henry, of the I. & C. will be here Thursday to look after the large crowd going to the State convention on that day. Beginning at 6:30 o'clock special cars will be run on limited time to Indianapolis. As soon as one car is filled another will be provided from the car barns here, so all will be comfortably seated. Secretary Clell Maple and a corps of assistants will be on hand to furnish convention tickets, Watson badges and American beauty roses to the crowds going on the early cars. In all probability the largest number of Rush county people ever present in Indianapolis at any previous event will be there. Regardless of the large number of people from all over the State who will be in attendance the yellow Watson badge will be in evidence everywhere and Rush county people will be seen on every hand.

Aside from the rank and file of the Republican party in this county, First Voters club of one hundred will go in body, as will a large number of women wearing the Watson badges, and singing his name in the soprano part, besides all the former football players and high school students of this city will form a merry bunch of rooters. It has been estimated that from 3000 to 3500 Rush county people will be in attendance. It will be a great occasion and great day for the goodly old county of Rush, for before the sun of the following day the Republicans in every part of Indiana, in every hamlet, town and city will be saying: "Well done: a most glorious day's work. We are highly pleased and enjoyed that Jim Watson of Rushville was chosen to head our State ticket for he will make the greatest and most notable campaign ever made by a nominee in this or any other State, and victory will be ours by a handsome, large majority."

LOCAL CONTRACTOR HAS TO PAY IN DAMAGE SUIT

Shelbyville Liberal: A case was settled in the Shelby circuit court Saturday, whereby George R. Kelley, of Rushville, and Enos Porter of this city, cement contractors, paid $100 to Earl Mings, as damages for personal injuries sustained in this city on the night of September 14th, 1907, when a delivery wagon he was driving was upset on account of the contractors having left a big pile of dirt along North West street.

Ralph Edgerton met with a very painful accident Sunday while taking a hand in a dog fight, acting the part of a peacemaker, between his Boston terrier and a neighbor's canine. The dogs had been fighting for several minutes like demons, when Ralph appeared on the scene, and as they showed no disposition to let up, he at once set about to restore peace. Failing in every other way to stop them, he took hold of his own dog to pull him off, when the other one directed his attention towards the young man, biting him through the little finger on the right hand.

A picture of Thomas Ryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Denny Ryan, of North Harrison street appeared on the Children's page of the Indianapolis Star yesterday.

A FORMER RUSH COUNTY WOMAN DIES IN ILLINOIS

Mrs. Scott Butler Succumbs to Enlargement of Liver at Monmouth

Mrs. John A. Cowan, of North Jackson street, received a telegram this morning from Monmouth, Illinois, stating that her sister-in-law, Mrs. Scott Butler, of that place, had died last night at 11 o'clock. Mr. Cowan has been at the bedside of his sister or the past week and was present when she died. Death was due to enlargement of the liver. Deceased was 63 years of age and had many friends here. Burial will occur Wednesday at Monmouth.

EDITORIALETTES

They are going to hang a crepe on the old town Thursday for it is surely going to be a dead place.

It's a cinch the Rushville women will go to Indianapolis in large numbers this week if there are 20,000 American beauty roses to be given away at Watson's headquarters.

If you can't go to the State convention this week, send some one.

Now that we have selected our Easter millinery, let us scatter flowers for Watson this week.

Fortunate is the man who has relatives in Shelbyville. Otherwise the congressional convention might prove an extended and cheese and cracker affair.

March is evidently thinking of going out like a "line" instead of a "lion," else the prognosticators are lying.

Only one night this week, will the ban on the curfew ordinance be lifted, and that will be the night we hold the reception for James E. Watson after the nomination.

More evidence of the good that walks hand in hand with Socialism as the bomb throwing in New York City Saturday.

The kids are turning in earlier these nights. The curfew is a requiem to them.

When the women wearing the wide hats meet now and want to kiss, they must be satisfied with a "soul kiss."

Walter Newhouse deputy county treasurer, was the recipient of a box of fragrant orange blossoms from a friend in California this morning.

BITTEN ON HAND BY A FIGHTING DOG

Ralph Edgerton Sustains Painful Wounds While Acting as Peace Maker

Tom Havens, who recently sold out his interest in the Rush County Grocery store has accepted a position with a canning and packing company of New York city and began his duties with the firm this morning.

Mr. Havens will travel for the firm and will have Indiana for a part of his territory. He is a hustling young business man and the company will find in him an able man for the responsibilities which he has assumed.

GIRL LEFT HOME AT DAYBREAK

Father Institutes Search But Unsuccessful in Locating his Daughter

TOOK ALL HER CLOTHES

Nineteen-Year-Old Mary Story, Declared her Home was very Unpleasant

There were tears in the eyes of nineteen-year-old Mary Story, as she came trudging in along the pike south of this city before daybreak this morning. She was lugging a heavy telescope and several packages containing all the clothes she possessed in the world. It was an unusual sight for such an hour in the morning, for it was just about 4 o'clock. No sooner had the girl reached the city than a telephone message came from her father, Lewis Story, who lives in Circleville, instructing Nightwatchman Tom Scanlan to apprehend the girl as she had run away from home.

A search was made for her by the officer, but he could find no trace of her. She was seen to cross the Main Street race bridge and come up on Main street to First street, where she turned west. It is feared that she has either left the city never to return again, or that in a fit of despondency she has decided to end her life.

The girl claimed on many occasions that her home ties were anything but pleasant, and had told some of her friends that some day she would leave her forever. The father is very much worried over her disappearance and will make every effort to locate her.

WHAT RUSHVILLE GIRLS ARE DOING

Two of Our Fair Daughters are up in the Race for Trip Abroad

In the European tour contest conducted by the Indianapolis Star, two of Rushville's fair daughters figure in prominent positions. Miss Edith Hiner leads the contest in the eighth district, having a total of 31,293 votes, while Miss Mary Neutzenhelzer is fifth with 12,482. Both are holding back votes and their comparative strength with other candidates is merely a matter of conjecture. A picture of Miss Hiner appeared in the Sunday Star.

A ROYAL REVERSAL

Dr. Hill, It Seems, Will Be Acceptable to Germany, After All.

THE KAISER BACKS DOWN

Certain Rumblings That Reverberated Across the Atlantic Caused a Change In Imperial Mind.

The Amende Is Made to This Government In the Most Graceful and Diplomatic Terms.

Berlin, March 30.—Emperor William having been fully advised as to the attitude of President Roosevelt and the feeling of the American public in regard to the alleged refusal of his majesty to receive Dr. David Jayne Hill as ambassador to Germany in succession to Charlemagne Tower, has recalled all the expressions of disapproval he recently sent to President Roosevelt.

EMPEROR WILLIAM.

welt and would be pleased to receive Dr. Hill as ambassador. The emperor has caused this view to be communicated to President Roosevelt.

The German foreign office has sent out the following official declaration on the subject: "The notices which have appeared hitherto in the foreign press in regard to the Hill affair have originated in the erroneous impression that it was intended in Berlin to recall the approval given here last autumn to Mr. Hill's appointment. This has never been thought of. It is true that doubts subsequently arose as to whether Mr. Hill would feel himself comfortable in the post of American ambassador to Berlin, but these doubts have been removed, so that nothing stands in the way of Mr. Hill's nomination to the Berlin embassy, and he will be welcome in Berlin now, as he would have been before, or as any other unobjectionable representative would be who should be named by President Roosevelt. It is stated emphatically that throughout the whole incident Ambassador Tower has not swerved from one instant from the straight line of absolutely loyal and honorable conduct, both toward his own government and the imperial German government."

Baron Von Sternberg, the German ambassador at Washington, has, during the last forty-eight hours, been in the closest touch with the foreign office, and has cabled fully concerning the matter. He described the need of a speedy arrangement of the affair and President Roosevelt's difficulties in meeting the emperor's inclination, and furthermore the unpleasant effect the whole controversy was having upon American public opinion.

The German foreign office since Saturday morning has sent a number of lengthy dispatches to the emperor at Venice. As soon as a definite statement of the emperor's wishes was received by the secretary for foreign affairs, Herr Von Schoen, the secretary, and Ambassador Tower had a long conference at the foreign office, at which the entire subject was gone over. At the conclusion of the conference Von Schoen cabled the foregoing statement to the German ambassador at Washington and complete additional explanations. Ambassador Tower also cabled to the state department the fullest details of all that had been done.

The aim of the German foreign office is to close the incident in a manner satisfactory to the president and the people of the United States. At first the foreign office, which is sensitive on any question relating to the emperor, was inclined to believe that a general denial of the statement that the emperor had declined to receive Dr. Hill as American ambassador might quiet the situation, pending a leisurely settlement. But it was evident from Baron Von Sternberg's dispatches that public opinion, as well as the American government, required some adequate and definite solution, and it was announced Saturday that the emperor would delay the departure of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern from Venice until Monday, presumably to afford time for the disposition of this matter.

It is certain that if Dr. Hill comes to Berlin as the American ambassador he will be most cordially welcomed and given every attention by the emperor and the German government. It is thought in Berlin that the emperor's original purpose was merely to show friendly solicitude concerning the American representative.

FRIENDSHIP AND BUSINESS

Cannot Be Permitted to Conflict in Diplomatic Relations.

Washington, March 30.—The curious fact about the Hill incident is that in all of its stages it has taken no official form. It has been extremely difficult to secure any admission from any authorized source in Washington that there have been any exchanges at all on this subject. Secretary Root's statement made at the initial stage to the effect that Ambassador Tower had notified him by cable that letter was on the way to Washington which would throw some light upon the matter has been about all that could be had officially for publication. There never has been the slightest doubt in diplomatic circles here of the accuracy of the first announcement that Dr. Hill was not fully acceptable to Emperor William. For at least a fortnight preceding the actual declaration there had been more or less quiet gossip about the situation at the German court. The conclusion was reached that this was a case that bore out the wisdom of the old adage that it is unsafe to mix business and friendship.

Emperor William was known to be of a warm, impulsive and sympathetic temperament, and it was readily understood here how he could have permitted his feeling of personal friendship for Ambassador Tower and his wife to sway him to the point where he was ready to look with disfavor upon their displacement, and it is believed that Emperor William was animated, not by any aversion to Dr. Hill or his spouse, but rather by a wish to keep near him the Towers, for whom he has conceived a warm friendship. Of course the thing could not be done; our government would be perfectly willing to admit the right of objection, but to go further would be to admit a right of nomination.

Governor Gives Final Word.

Albany, N. Y., March 30.—Governor Hughes last night announced that he had denied the application for a reprieve for Chester Gillette, and no act of the governor that can now be foreseen will interfere with Gillette's execution at Auburn prison, for the murder of his sweetheart, Grace Brown, at Big Moose lake, in the Adirondacks, July 11, 1906.

Then He Shot.

Wellsville, O., March 30.—Because Mrs. Spires, wife of Constable William Spires, refused to elope with him, George Snowden of Steubenville, O., shot the woman and then turned the gun upon himself. Snowden died almost instantly. The woman is still living, but physicians say her wounds will prove fatal. Both are negroes.

"First Aid" Idea For Railroads.

Besides the customary ax and crowbar passengers have seen for years in a glass case in railroad coaches, Dr. Insel H. Berry urged the other day at the annual meeting in New York of the Society For Instruction in First Aid to the Injured that each train leaving New York city should be compelled to carry one kit containing bandages, whisky, splints, plaster, sterilized cotton, etc., for use in case of accident or sickness. He said hundreds of trainmen had been graduated from the society and consequently knew how to use such supplies to the best advantage.

LAST WORDS.

Thoughts That Marked the Passing of Some Noted Men.

There is a collection of "last words" of celebrated men which contains many beautiful and startling phrases. Whether they were really uttered by the men to whom they have been credited, says the Berliner Post, is another matter. "Thus the words of Augustus, 'The comedy is at an end—did I play my part well?' are known to nearly every reader. The collection of last words of great physicians published by 'The British Medical Journal' gives Haller credit for saying, 'The artery beats—it beats no more,' and says of Nothnagel that he wrote: 'The night of July 6, after a violent attack of angina pectoris, * * * I will die of arterial calcification.' Cooper, Bright and Brodie died with blessings upon their lips, and Darwin, looking death calmly in the face, said, 'I really do not fear death.' Locolz's last words were flippancy: 'Au revoir, gentlemen. At the autopsy we will meet again.' None of these classic sentences, however, impress one so much as did the words of one of the few mortals who to our knowledge went into the unknown with minds undimmed. He was an old man who had lived a good and full life. With his last breath he said: 'It is not yet time. I want to stay'—that was the voice of nature."

Mysterious Murder of Woman.

Trenton, N. J., March 30.—Mrs. Francis Kabe was found murdered at her home in Fallsington, Pa., Sunday morning. There were two stabs found on the body and the skull was fractured. A broken chair and other conditions in the room gave evidence of a struggle. The woman's husband is serving a term in jail for larceny. There is no clue to the murderer.

Nearing Its Destination.

Baton Rouge, La., March 30.—The president's yacht, the Mayflower, with Mrs. Roosevelt and party on board, passed Baton Rouge at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon and will reach New Orleans this afternoon.

DISASTER IN MINE

More Than Three Score Wyoming Miners Fall Victims to Explosion.

RESCUE PARTY IS CAUGHT

A Half Hundred Brave Men Seeking Victims of First Explosion Caught by a Second.

The Mine Is Blazing Furiously and All Bodies Are Probably Incinerated.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 30.—Between fifty-five and seventy men lost their lives in two explosions in coal mine No. 1, owned by the Union Pacific Coal company at Hanna, Saturday afternoon. The explosion was caused by gas and coal dust, and each was followed by fire. The first occurred at 3 o'clock, when eighteen mine workers, including a superintendent and three bosses, were killed.

The second explosion occurred at 10:30 o'clock Saturday night, snuffing out the lives of forty to fifty members of a rescue party, including State Mine Inspector D. M. Elfe. The names of the men killed in the first explosion were learned from the company's books, but those of the rescuers were not known, as no record was kept of those who volunteered for this dangerous work.

When the latter explosion occurred additional appeals were telegraphed to all surrounding towns for assistance. One train was at once rushed west from Omaha, carrying officials of the Union Pacific railroad and the Union Pacific Coal company. The regular force of men employed at the mines were pressed into rescue work.

The bodies of four of the eighteen men who lost their lives in the first explosion were located, but owing to the increasing volume of gas which threatened to explode at any moment, no effort was made to remove them to the surface.

Fire started in the colliery a week ago Sunday, since which time attempts at regular intervals have been made to extinguish it. Saturday it was deemed unsafe to send miners down into the workings and they were notified not to report for duty. Superintendent Briggs, with a team of picked men, the best and most experienced in the camp, went into the mine to fight the fire, but at 2 o'clock the flames had become beyond their control and at 3 o'clock connected with the walled-off gas and a terrific explosion followed. The victims are all below the tenth level and it is likely that the flames have consumed the corpses.

IDLE HOURS IN SENATE

Upper House Came Near Voting Itself Out of Business.

Washington, March 30.—Interest in the doings of congress this week will be centered in the progress of the Aldrich currency bill, which passed the senate on Friday and reached the house today. While it has been sent over to the house, the decision to refer the measure to the committee on banking and currency will have the effect of postponing the crisis which the bill must sooner or later encounter in the house. Its friends, however, are very sanguine that it will meet the same success that came it in the senate.

The bill making appropriations for the District of Columbia will follow the agricultural appropriation bill in the house.

The senate came near voting itself out of business when it passed the Aldrich currency bill, and with that measure disposed of, for the time being finds itself almost without material to work on. The senate is never at a loss, however, to find a subject for discussion, and there need be no apprehension of a suspension of business pending the bringing out by committees of measures before them. The Warner bill for the reinstatement of the negro soldiers who were discharged because of the Brownsburg incident will probably be reported by the committee on military affairs on Tuesday, but probably not discussed until later in the session.

Excursion Steamer Dynamited.

St. Paul, Minn., March 30.—An attempt was made here shortly after 6 o'clock last evening to blow up the excursion steamer C. W. Cowles, owned by Captain George Winans of this city. A dynamite bomb with a slow fuse was placed in the private stateroom of Captain Winans through a transom and was suspended from the ceiling. The bomb exploded, completely destroying three staterooms. The loss is estimated at $3,000. No one was on the boat at the time, and none was injured.

Newspaper Men Organize.

Washington, March 30.—The National Press club of Washington was organized Sunday at a meeting of local newspaper men and Washington correspondents of newspapers throughout the United States. The objects of the organization are for the maintenance of literary tastes and the encouragement of hospitable intercourse among newspaper men.

WEAK KIDNEYS MAKE WEAK BODIES.

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Ills of People

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking down.

Overtime, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come, and there is an ever increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill, Rushville cures are the proof.

Mr. Berry Abernathy, 818 W. Third Street, Rushville, Ind., says: "My husband has been subject to attacks of lameness. He was troubled with a severe lameness in the small of the back which would come on suddenly and force him to stop work. The last attack seized him while feeling perfectly well and he suffered the sharpest kind of pain in his back. He applied plasters, liniments and numerous remedies but received little benefit. Reading of Doan's Kidney Pills, he was induced to get a box at F. B. Johnson & Company's drug store. They soon broke up the spell, his headaches ceased and he regained his strength and buoyancy again. We think highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and are pleased to let others know of them."

NO TIME IS TO BE WASTED

The Program For State Convention This Week Provides For Two Strictly Business-Like Sessions.

Oratory Will Mark the First Session and the Second Will Be Given to Nominations.

Indianapolis, March 30.—Details for the Republican state convention next Wednesday and Thursday have just about been completed and the convention program is practically complete. The delegates will meet by districts in various rooms of the statehouse at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning to name district officers of the convention, and members of the several committees.

The first session will be called to order in Tomlinson hall at 2 o'clock by James P. Goodrich, state chairman. Congressman Jesse Overstreet of Indianapolis will be made temporary chairman and as such will deliver the party keynote, which will require probably an hour's time.

Reports will then be made by the committee on rules and permanent organization. This committee will, it is thought, recommend Congressman John C. Chaney, from the Second district, for permanent chairman. This report will be followed by one from the credentials committee. The report of the committee on resolutions will follow. Then will come speeches by prominent members of the party, notably Governor Hanly, Senator James A. Hemenway and Senator Beveridge.

The second day's session will be called to order at 9 o'clock and the balloting for nominations will begin immediately. The nomination for governor will be made first and that for lieutenant governor will follow. The governorship race may be long drawn out, as there are four starters—Hugh T. Miller of Columbus, Charles W. Miller of Goshen, James E. Watson of Rushville, and William L. Taylor of Indianapolis.

For lieutenant governor there are only two candidates—Emmett F. Branch of Martinsville and Fremont Goodwine of Williamsport.

There are seven uncontested nominations, so these will be disposed of in a rush. The offices and unopposed candidates are: secretary of state, Fred Sims, Frankfort; auditor of state, John C. Billheimer, Washington; treasurer of state, Oscar Hadley, Plainfield; attorney general, James Birmingham, Muncie; reporter of the supreme and appellate courts, George W. Self-Corydon, and judge of the appellate court, David Myers, Greensburg.

For superintendent of public instruction there are three candidates—Lawrence McTurnan, Anderson; James H. Tomlin, Shelbyville, and E. G. Bauman, Mt. Vernon—so a long contest may result, although it is not anticipated.

There are also three candidates for state statistician—Acll Alexander of Marion; J. L. Peetz, Kokomo, and John F. Warbrinton, Crawfordsville—so another contest may develop, although this, too, is regarded as unlikely.

Another first ballot nomination will be made for judge of the supreme court, as there are only two candidates—John H. Gillett, Hammond, and Quincy Myers, Logansport.

A MERGER PROPOSED

Southern Indiana Teachers Propose Amalgamation With Northern.

Indianapolis, March 30.—The Southern Indiana Teachers' association before adjourning its thirty-second annual session took the preliminary step that may lead to wiping out of existence both that and the Northern Indiana Teachers' association by merging them into an Indiana Teachers' association. That step consisted in the appointment of a committee composed of F. W. Cooley of Evansville, C. M. Marble of Jeffersonville, and C. C. Coleman of Brazil, to wait on the northern Indiana teachers during their session this week and ask for the appointment of a similar committee, the two committees then to consider the advisability of amalgamation, and to report back to their associations at their meeting next year.

It is not known what will be the sentiment of the Northern Indiana Teachers' association meeting when the proposal is presented to it, but in any event there can be no amalgamation before next year, and possibly not for two years. The Southern Indiana Teachers' association elected the following new officers:

President—T. F. Fitzgibbon, Columbus.

Secretary—A. O. Neal, Franklin.

Treasurer—E. Fiske Allen, Indianapolis.

Executive Committee—Harrold Barnes, Princeton; W. P. Morgan, Terre Haute; E. C. Jerman, Greencburg; W. F. Axtell, Washington, and Frank A. Gause, Salem.

Chairman Primary Section—Miss Louise Dietz, Madison.

Chairman Grammar Section—C. A. Prosser, New Albany.

Chairman High School Section—B. D. Remy, Franklin.

Chairman Kindergarten Section—Miss Alice Butler, Vincennes.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

Was About to Be Tested When Fanatic's Bomb Exploded Prematurely.

New York, March 30.—Robert Hunter, the noted sociologist, declares that he was not only present at Saturday's demonstration of the unemployed in Union Square, that ended in a bomb explosion, but that had opportunity offered he would have addressed the crowd in defiance of police prohibition and so brought about a test in the courts of the right of free speech. Mr. Hunter's position in the whole matter was set forth in a statement over his signature given to the press. The writer deplores the "outrage" of the bomb and refers to its author as a fanatic, who has injured the cause of the unemployed. Mr. Hunter says until he arrived at the square he was ignorant of the fact that speech-making had been forbidden. He learned this of the police and then determined to speak in order that the right of peaceful assembly and free speech might be tested in the courts. He adds that he had no chance to be heard, for presently the police "charged the crowd with incredible brutality." Mr. Hunter describes his own escape from under a horse's hoofs, tells how he was dragged by officers from the steps of a building from which he had hoped to speak, and how what was intended as a peaceful assembly in furtherance of aid for the unemployed was broken up with a scene that he thought "could not be duplicated outside of Russia." Selig Silverstein, the youth in whose hands the bomb exploded as he was about to hurl it at Captain Miles O'Reilly and his squad of twenty men, is still alive in Bellevue hospital.

Reports will then be made by the committee on rules and permanent organization. This committee will, it is thought, recommend Congressman John C. Chaney, from the Second district, for permanent chairman. This report will be followed by one from the credentials committee. The report of the committee on resolutions will follow. Then will come speeches by prominent members of the party, notably Governor Hanly, Senator James A. Hemenway and Senator Beveridge.

The National Bank of Commerce was the largest national bank in capital and deposits that ever failed in the United States, and its resumption of business will do much toward bettering conditions in the financial world, especially in the Southwest.

W. B. Ridgely, who will be president of the reorganized bank, and who resigned last week as comptroller of the currency, is on the board of directors and is the largest stockholder in the new bank. His brother, Edward Ridgely, will be cashier; former Governor D. R. Francis of St. Louis is one of the new directors.

Murdered Three for Loot.

Wheeling, W. Va., March 30.—The bodies of Angelo and Tony Selvestre and Bernardo Dagannon were found Sunday, each with a bullet in the breast, at Miller's Station, in Jefferson county, O., opposite this city, under circumstances which disclose a triple murder. The Selvestre brothers were found in a shanty in which they lived and Dagannon in a field half a mile away, where he had died as he tried to climb a fence. The object of the murder was evidently robbery. Rocky George, a companion, has not been seen since the bodies were found and officers started a search for him.

Shot Stage Mate and Himself.

St. Paul, Minn., March 30.—William M. Trainor, a vaudeville actor, shot and instantly killed Mrs. William Pryor, an actress, with whom he was traveling, in their apartment at the Clarion hotel, early Sunday morning, and then committed suicide. Mrs. Pryor was about twenty-five years old. An open letter found in the room after the murder indicated that Mrs. Pryor had threatened to leave Trainor. Three dollars was found in Trainor's pocket, and it is thought that they were near the end of their resources. Trainor's home was in West Union, Ohio. He was about thirty years old.

Policeman Shot Three.

Philadelphia, March 30.—Policeman George Eells, aged sixty years, last night shot and killed Mrs. Mary Andress and probably fatally injured Ella Paschall, his alleged common-law wife, and Kate Jewett, a niece of Mrs. Andress. Domestic troubles are said to have been responsible for the tragedy. Mrs. Eells, or Miss Paschall, claimed recently that Eells had treated her cruelly and went to stay with Mrs. Andress. Eells did not like the interference in his domestic affairs and is alleged to have declared he would clean out the Andress household.

No Trouble at Juneau.

Juneau, Alaska, March 30.—At 4 o'clock Sunday morning Company F, Tenth Infantry, arrived at Treadwell on the army steamer Peterson, with orders from General Brush at Vancouver to aid the local marshals. The arrival of the troops was unexpected. There is no disorder here. A number of arrests of miners for carrying concealed weapons have been made. A peace committee of the union is keeping a strict patrol of the town, and there is little if any drunkenness.

Victim of Train Robbers.

Newton, Kan., March 30.—O. A. Bailey of Kansas City, an express messenger of the Wells-Fargo Express company, was brutally murdered by an unknown robber on Santa Fe train No. 115, between Florence and Newton, early Sunday morning. Both safes, the local and the through safe, were ransacked and at least $1,000 in money and some jewelry taken. Whether this is the full amount the robber secured is not known.

To The Publishers of The Republican:

Your attention is called to the following changes in the Postal Laws effective April 1st, 1908.

Dailies, within three months;

Semi-Weeklies, within nine months;

They shall not be counted in the legitimate list of subscribers and copies mailed on account thereof shall not be accepted for mailing at the second class rate of postage of one cent a pound, but may be mailed at the transient rate of one cent for each copy, prepaid by stamps affixed. To make a long story short the sum substance of the letter is "Pay Your Subscription in Advance."

On April first (time set by Uncle Sam) we will have to discontinue all papers that are not paid up to that time, (April 1st, 1908)

We would ask that any subscriber whose red tag on the paper does not read "lap08" for later, give this matter their immediate attention. Remember this is Uncle Sam's law,—not ours.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, MARCH 30, 1908

Lloyd J. Henley, formerly of the Indianapolis Star, born and raised in Carthage, this county, has purchased the Shelbyville Republican and assumes control today. Mr. Henley is a good newspaper man with ample experience to give Shelbyville an A No. 1 Republican paper.

There is a good deal to be said in favor of putting the whole question of a revision of the tariff into the hands of a commission of experts. No one seems to be satisfied with the tariff as it now stands because changed conditions have made people of all shades of tariff belief realize that in equalities and abuses abound which need to be remedied. It ought to be possible for such a commission free from partisan bias to so consider the tariff dispassionately and thoroughly in all its bearings as to enable it to present a plan of revision, which, in the main, would be acceptable to both political parties.

Since we have experienced a few summerlike days it is well to contemplate the fly nuisance which will soon have to be faced. A leading London physician is reported as saying "It is inconceivable to me how people have tolerated the fly pest so long. I firmly believe that flies will convey from place to place almost every infectious disease known, and their agency in causing epidemics of illness among children is well recognized." If the doctor or anyone else can give the world a method by which the fly pest can be conquered, he will have earned the lasting gratitude of both man and beast.

Another gang of marauding boys has been operating in various parts in this city and committed depredations almost unhindered. When caught in the act of breaking into barns they had the impudence not only to be extremely saucy, but they even cursed ladies who remonstrated with them and talked to them in a motherly way. And yet in view of the fact that Rushville is infested with such boys the city authorities were extremely lenient with them. If parents fail to do their duty to look after their children and raise the boys properly the authorities should treat such culprits firmly and even summarily in order to stamp out this lawlessness among the youth of this city. Procrastination don't go in such cases. These boys will laugh among themselves and consider themselves extremely smart in hoodwinking the marshal and the mayor. If the city authorities will show firmness and mete out the proper punishment it will set a good example. Some heavy fines imposed for dilatory parents to pay will work wonders in such cases.

New Lighthouse Plan.

Germany has a new idea in lighthouses. It consists in using a vertical shaft of light instead of a horizontal one. By this means it is thought it will be visible for a greater distance than at present. At 100 nautical miles out on the ocean the lights along perhaps 100 miles of coast will be visible to the navigator, it is calculated. All the usual devices of dark and light intervals and change of colors can be applied to render the identification of the lights certain. Experiments with the system are to be made at once by the German naval authorities at Friederichsort.

Best Dressed Man Owner of Fifty Suits
The best dressed man in the United States, according to the dictum of the Merchant Tailors' National Exchange, which met in New York recently, is C. S. Eddy, a banker's clerk of Providence, R. I. Eddy possesses some fifty odd suits. He says that is approximately the number, but really it's too much trouble to count them, you know. There is a suit for each day in the month, suits for social functions, for driving, walking, for almost every special thing a human being can do. Moreover, it is said, he is constantly adding to his collection.

UNSPOKEN WORDS.

UNSPOKEN words, like treasures in the mine, Are valueless until we give them birth. Like unfound gold their hidden beauties shine. Which God has made to bless and gild the earth. How sad 'twould be to see a master's hand Strike glorious notes upon a voiceless lute, But, oh, what pain, when at God's own command, A heartstring thrills with kindness, but is mute!

THEN hide it not, the music of the soul— Dear sympathy, expressed with kindly voice, But let it like a shining river roll To deserts dry—hearts that would rejoice. Oh, let the symphony of kindly words Sound for the poor, the friendless and the weak, And he will bless you! He who struck these chords Will strike another when in turn you seek.

—John Boyle O'Reilly.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, March 30.—The decks are being cleared here for the Republican state convention next Wednesday and Thursday, when one of the most interesting contests for the nomination for governor within the memory of the present generation of Indiana politicians, will be settled. If the statements of the managers of the various candidates are to be believed, four men will receive the nomination and for governor. The veteran Captain John K. Gowdy, who has been through many hard-fought political battles, says that Representative James E. Watson of Rushville will be nominated very early in the convention. From the camp of Charles H. Miller of Goschen, comes the declaration of Wilson Roose and others engaged in the management of his campaign, that Miller will win and that he will lead on every ballot. Oliver Ensley, Seventh district chairman, who is in charge of William L. Taylor's interests, says that Taylor is in position to win on the third or fourth ballot and that he will come through with the nomination if his friends stand together. Lieutenant Governor Hugh T. Miller of Columbus humorously declares that he will have a majority of the votes on the last ballot, which means that he has a rosy view of his own chances. So intense is the feeling among the followers of the candidates that it is difficult to make a forecast.

The indorsement of John W. Kern of Indianapolis for the nomination for vice president was not given as a matter of form, but in dead earnest. Kern will have the enthusiastic and loyal support of the Democrats of Indiana at the Denver convention if he cares to enter the race for second place. It is believed that Kern would like to have the nomination, but that he will not make a fight for it. Whether or not his name will be presented will be determined after the Indiana delegation reaches Denver. Kern is one of Bryan's close personal friends and the "peerless one" has more than once indicated his preference for him. In many of his Indiana speeches two years ago he intimated that he regarded Kern as a good candidate for the vice presidency, and unless he makes up his mind that New York or some Eastern state ought to have second place on the ticket, politicians here would not be surprised if he should turn to Indiana for a running mate in hopes of swinging this state back into the Democratic column. In the meantime Kern's friends propose to do as much missionary work as possible in his behalf, so that Democrats in other states may know that Indiana has a good candidate.

Vice President Fairbanks has written to Secretary Riddick of the Republican state committee that he will not be able to attend the convention this week owing to demands on his time as presiding officer of the senate. He will be indorsed, however, for president, and the delegation will be instructed to vote for him. The convention will name Senators Beveridge and Hemenway, Governor Hanly and Chairman James P. Goodrich as the delegates-at-large. Senators Hemenway and Beveridge and members of the Indiana delegation at Washington arrived here today to attend the convention.

There is considerable speculation as to what influence Governor Hanly will exercise over the coming state convention. Much surprise was caused last week when it was learned that the governor had written personal letters to the delegates, urging them to stand for the reforms he has inaugurated and asking them to call on him during the convention. Whether or not he will make a vigorous fight to nominate his successor is not known. He is openly for Lieutenant Governor Miller for governor and for Representative E. F. Branch of Martinsville for Lieutenant governor.

During the Democratic state convention it developed that there will be two or three strong Democratic candidates for the United States senate next winter. B. F. Shively of South Bend, who received the complimentary vote for the senate two years ago, is a candidate, as is also Colonel Charles Jewett of New Albany. Nor would it be surprising if John W. Kern should make the race if the Democrats do not nominate him for vice president.

This Is an Era of Conscience.

By Governor JOSEPH W. FOLK of Missouri.

THINGS are not tolerated for a moment now that a half dozen years ago were SUBMITTED TO IN SILENCE. Then BRIBERY was the common and accepted thing all over the land. Not that all men gave bribes or that a majority of officials took bribes, but it was generally regarded either with INDIFFERENCE OR DESPAIR. Six years ago men would give and take bribes and still pride themselves on their HONESTY. They have learned better than that now. The PUBLIC CONSCIENCE has taught them better. It has not been long since men high up in the commercial world deemed it entirely proper to accept rebates from railroads contrary to law. They seemed unconscious of any wrong.

The public conscience has awakened to the fact that a corporation consists merely of INDIVIDUALS EXERCISING CHARTER POWERS from a state. The corporation these individuals conduct is NO BETTER OR WORSE than the individuals composing the corporation. The people are beginning to know that contempt for law is no less reprehensible when plotted over a directors' table than when shouted under a red flag at an anarchists' meeting, and they frequently stand related as cause and effect. Corporations have been too often used as MASKS TO CONCEAL THE CRIMES OF INDIVIDUALS. The era of conscience demands the same standard of morality for corporations as is required of the individuals who compose them.

IN THIS ERA OF CONSCIENCE THE PEOPLE ARE REALIZING THAT THE GOVERNMENT OF CITY, STATE AND NATION BELONGS TO THEM AND THAT THEY CAN TAKE IT INTO THEIR OWN HANDS WHENEVER THEY WISH TO DO SO AND MAKE THAT GOVERNMENT JUST AS GOOD AS THEY DESIRE OR JUST AS BAD AS THEY PERMIT IT TO BECOME.

Sir John Herschel after dinner in 1826 asked his friend, Charles Babbage, how he would show both sides of a shilling at once. Babbage replied by taking a shilling from his pocket and holding it to a mirror. This did not satisfy Sir John, who set the shilling spinning upon the dinner table, at the same time pointing out that if the eye is placed on a level with the rotating coin both sides can be seen at once. Babbage was so struck by the experiment that the next day he described it to a friend, Dr. Fitson, who immediately made a working model. On one side of a disk was drawn a bird, on the other side an empty bird cage. When the card was revolved on a silk thread the bird appeared to be in the cage. This model showed the persistence of vision upon which all moving pictures depend for their effects. The eye retains the image of the object seen for a fraction of a second after the object has been removed. This model was called the thaumotrope. Next came the zoetrope, or wheel of life. A cylinder was perforated with a series of slots, and within the cylinder was placed a band of drawing of dancing men. On the apparatus being slowly rotated the figures seen through the slots appeared to be in motion. The first systematic photographs taken at regular intervals of men and animals were made by Muybridge in 1877.

CHAPTER XXIII.

AT 5 o'clock in the afternoon two days later Kinross was once more with the assembled Morningstars in the farm kitchen, the entire family, including Eunice being present at the important interview he was having with them.

The withdrawal of Georgiana's all pervading presence from the farm had made the family seem to Kinross on his return quite shrunken and small.

He had wondered how, after his few days' absence and his fresh contact with the world, Eunice would appear to him from the point of view of his own and her aunt's world, and it seemed to him now as he looked at her sitting opposite him at the kitchen table that she was even more detached from her environment than he had at first thought her and far more akin to his own and her aunt's sphere of life than that of the farm—to which, indeed, she seemed entirely alien.

He fancied today that the habitual melancholy of her eyes was intensified. But surely the great news he had for her would quickly dissipate it and the original "pale drab" of her existence change to rosy hues—perhaps, alas, to lurid ones—for in his heart he felt not a little misgiving as to the possibly harmful effect of her seeming good fortune.

Before returning he had sent a message ahead of him to Mr. Morningstar, warning him to be ready against his arrival to pay over to Eunice immediately the sum of $3,000 or be prepared to accept the consequences.

The effect of this communication had been to lead the Morningstars to urge upon Eunice once more the suit of Abe, but neither their persuasions nor their anger had succeeded in moving her.

On his arrival he had of course insisted upon seeing Eunice alone. But he had met with such violent opposition to this from both Mr. and Mrs. Morningstar that even the girl herself drew back, unwilling to brave the storm that would follow her open defiance. He saw that part, at least, of what he had to tell her of her affairs would have to be told in the presence of the family. Surely the news would make her able to throw off the last vestige of her yoke.

So, first, he had forced Morningstar, under the lash of his threats, to sign, in a cold perspiration of horror, the draft for $3,000 (which in fact represented at least a fourth of his possessions) and pass it over to the bewilderment Eunice.

"Now, Mr. Morningstar," he began when this transaction had been completed, leaving the farmer utterly shaken out of his orbit, "I have a piece of news for you and your wife and for Eunice."

Eunice's face was pale, and her eyes, intent upon his face, were burning bright. He wished that he had the power to read all her thoughts, unique young creature that she was. It was distasteful, even painful, to have to break his news to her in the presence of these people, who, indeed, seemed her natural enemies, but it was apparently unavoidable.

"What's your news?" Mrs. Morningstar curiously demanded, her curiosity getting the better of her rage against him, and her husband, too, bitter as was his chagrin, looked up keenly, suspicious of further calamity.

"When I spent the night in the haunted room I made some discoveries. I found out, as you know, about the $4,000 belonging to Eunice. I found out also some other things."

He paused an instant. They all waited breathlessly.

"The man and woman who left Eunice here were not her parents."

"Now," exclaimed Mrs. Morningstar, "you ain't tellin' us that!"

"Och, my souls!" breathed Ollie. "Forevermore!"

"Kin you prove it?" demanded Mr. Morningstar sullenly.

"What did they do with havin' her, then, along with 'em?" cried Mrs. Morningstar.

"They had stolen her from her home."

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Mrs. Morningstar, her eyes bulging.

"I had wished to talk to Eunice of this and other details alone, but as you made that impossible I'll give you the bare facts now, after which," he added in a tone of authority, "Eunice will come with me to hear in private what concerns no one but herself."

The Morningstars stared resentfully, but no one answered.

"Her father," Kinross went on, "was W. W. Wolcott of New York. He was a man of large means. Eunice was his only child. Her aunt, Miss Wolcott of Washington, who believed her to be dead, has meantime had possession of the fortune rightfully belonging to Eunice. She is ready now to make restitution."

"Kin you prove it?" Abe here repeated his father's demand.

"How did you find it out?" asked Morningstar.

"Haunted rooms reveal secrets," Kinross answered, with a solemnity that made the family shudder to a man.

"How much is comin' to her?" inquired Abe covetously.

"A very great fortune." While the family gaped, speechless,

The girl looked thoughtful, but said no more.

"Under these circumstances, Mr. Morningstar," Kinross continued, "you understand you will of course have to part with Eunice."

Mrs. Morningstar started as if dodging a blow.

Would this man never have done tormenting and robbing them?

"You think you're a-goin' to take her away, do you?" she exclaimed fiercely.

"Why," he smiled, "even you could scarcely expect her to remain here now."

"I ain't leavin' her go!" she stoutly maintained, evidently not yet realizing at all the significance of what she had heard.

Kinross drew a purse from his pocket and, taking out some bills, laid them before Eunice. "Your aunt gave me this money to give to you for your expenses until you join her in New York."

The girl's eyes opened wide. "I am to go to my aunt!" she breathlessly asked. "My aunt! It seems so strange," she said, her face flushing, quivering in her voice that revealed pitifully her lifelong loneliness, "to feel that there is some one in the world belonging to me!"

"Your aunt expects to send her secretary, Mrs. Kenyon, a widow, down here for you next week to take you back with her to New York. This money, she instructed me to tell you, you can use in getting yourself some clothing for your journey with the help of Mrs. Kenyon. When you are with your aunt she will do everything in the world for your welfare, I know."

"Eunice," cried Abe, starting up, "you ain't a-goin' away to stay away—ain't you, you ain't?" he pleaded. "Och, Eunice, if you'd say yes to me I'd leave you hire the washin' with the money you got your inheritance to you, and I'd leave you spend at the cloes all you wanted, and we'd go a good bit, too, to circuses and county fairs and even to the roof garden in town. We could afford to with your havin' such a lot yet! Why, I guess we could afford most anything! Won't you say yes to me?"

Eunice slowly turned her eyes upon him. "Say 'yes' to you now with freedom—freedom just at my hand? Marry you and remain a bond slave, with my heart still crying out as it has done all my life, 'Who will deliver me from the body of this death?' Tie myself to you, when liberty and the wide world lie before me? Oh, Abe," she exclaimed, "if the thought of marrying you was horrible to me while I was under your mother's and father's tyranny how must it look to me now that I am free—free to live, to be myself, to feed the hunger of my mind and soul with all the beauty of the world? Marry you, Abe?" A little rippling laugh broke from her lips. Kinross felt his brain beat with the shock of the joy that suddenly surged up in his heart at the revelation of her words while he mentally pronounced himself

"Yes, anyhow!" Mr. Morningstar also bitterly reproached his wife.

But Mrs. Morningstar turned on the latter resentfully. "Just as if you wasn't always agin' it as much as me!"

"I only thought they oughtn't to engage to marry till they was sure once," he declared.

"Well, if you ain't—" But she checked herself judiciously. "That's all I meant, too!" she also declared, turning appealingly to Eunice.

But the girl did not reply. Mrs. Morningstar sighed heavily.

"But look a-here!" suddenly cried Mr. Morningstar. "It'll spite that there aunt somepin' terrible to have to give up the money after her havin' it all this time and thinkin' it's hers!"

"I guess, too!" agreed his wife.

Eunice glanced an inquiry at Kinross. "Will it leave my aunt poor?"

"Comparatively. Not what you have been accustomed to call poor."

The girl looked thoughtful, but said no more.

"Under these circumstances, Mr. Morningstar," Kinross continued, "you understand you will of course have to part with Eunice."

Mrs. Morningstar started as if dodging a blow.

FIGHTER OF GRAFTERS

Career of G. L. Lilley, Submarine Boat Investigation Starter.

EARLY LIFE ONE OF HARDSHIP

Made Spectacular Entry Into Politics. Quick to Scent Graft and Give It Battle—Opposed Free Seed Abuse. Downed Paper Trust.

The farm of his father, John Leavens Lilley, near Oxford, Mass., was the place, and Aug. 3, 1859, was the date of the birth of George Leavens Lilley, the member of the United States house of representatives from Connecticut whose insistence for a full investigation into the submarine boat scandal has attracted attention all over the United States.

His entire boyhood life was one of hardship and toll, not play. While still under the age of ten he had to arise at 3 o'clock in the morning to cover a milk route and get through with it in time to attend the country school at 9 o'clock. He was usually so tired on reaching school that he would be found fast asleep at his desk in the conclusion of the Lord's Prayer, with which the school sessions were opened, says the New York World. In spite of his handicap he reached the head of his classes.

When he was fourteen his parents moved into Oxford, leaving him behind to run his uncle's farm. The Lileys next went to Middleboro, and there the boy peddled meat from a cart for his father, who occasionally sent him to Boston to buy supplies. On one of these trips the lad, who was not eighteen, learned that there was a shortage of potatoes in New England and that there was an abundance of them in Nova Scotia. He induced a Boston merchant whom he knew to lend him $2,000, with which he went to Nova Scotia, chartered a schooner and brought a cargo of potatoes to Boston, where he sold them at a handsome profit.

Three years later he was a salesman, with two rival concerns offering him a partnership. One of these partnerships resulted in the establishment in Waterbury, Conn., of the firm of Lilley, Swift & Co. His entry into politics in 1860 was spectacular. He entered a town meeting at Waterbury which was packed with adherents of a controlling ring of grafters and denounced its extravagance. A road repairing contract was about to be awarded for $35,000, and he offered to do the work and live up to all its specifications for $3,500. He was not only howled down, but was threatened with personal violence.

That experience determined his future course in life. He announced himself as a Republican candidate for the legislature and as a foe to all grafters, large or small. He was overwhelmingly elected and made good from the day of his election. He served a second term and was then sent to congress, where before he was hardly warm in his chair he defeated an attempt to extend an electric light company's franchise in Hawaii upon terms that were oppressive to consumers. It was a hard fight, for he was up against seasoned congressmen, but he won out.

His fight in the case of free seed distribution has not yet been forgotten. Members of congress, with an eye to the support of the farmers, encouraged it until it became the practice for the members to flood the rural parts of their districts not with rare and valuable seeds, but with old and common trash, because the other kind could not be supplied in "political" quantities.

To attack this abuse on the floor of the house was to subject oneself to being misunderstood as unfriendly to the cause of agriculture, but with his usual courage Mr. Lilley rose on the floor and denounced the practice—not the distribution of rare and valuable seeds, but the wholesale draft on the agricultural department for cheap seeds for purely political ends. He was told he would lose the "farmer vote" in Connecticut, but he believed the farmers too intelligent to misunderstand, and anyway he was attacking a wrong, and that was the first thing to be thought of. He mustered only three votes for his resolution to cut out the practice, which showed a contrasting lack of courage among the other members. He tried it again at the succeeding session and was again defeated, although he had increased his number of supporters from three to a hundred.

In the fall of 1904 Mr. Lilley introduced the resolution that eventually resulted in the trial and conviction of the General Paper company, popularly known as the paper trust, and the dissolving of the combine, which had artificially advanced the price of print paper to the newspapers of the country. These results were due almost wholly to the Connecticut congressman, who personally spurred the judiciary committee of the house and afterward the legal department of the government to action.

Village Suffers Fire Loss.

New Albany, Ind., March 27.—Fire destroyed two blocks of residences and business buildings at Greenville, twelve miles northwest of this city. The town has no fire department, with the exception of a bucket brigade, and as a high wind was blowing at the time, the citizens had a difficult time in getting the flames under control.

A LAZY LIVER

May be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. It would be a stupid as well as savage thing to beat a weary or starved man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging, torpid liver it is a great mistake to lash it with strong drastic drugs. A torpid liver is but an indication of an ill-nourished, enfeebled body whose organs are weary with over-work. Start with the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in working order and see how quickly your liver will become active. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of "liver complaint," or torpid liver, by its wonderful control over the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood-making glands, cleanses the system of poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs.

Symptoms. If you have bitter or bad taste in the morning, poor or variable appetite, coated tongue, foul breath, constipated or irregular bowels, feel weak, easily tired, despondent, frequent headaches, pain or distress in "small of back," gnawing or distressed feeling in stomach, perhaps nausea, bitter or sour "risings" in throat after eating, and kindred symptoms of weak stomach and torpid liver, or biliousness, no medicine will relieve you more promptly or cure you more permanently than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Perhaps only a part of the above symptoms will be present at one time and yet point to torpid liver, or biliousness and weak stomach. Avoid all hot bread and biscuits, griddle cakes and other indigestible food and take the "Golden Medical Discovery" regularly and stick to its use until you are vigorous and strong.

Of Golden Seal root, which is one of the prominent ingredients of "Golden Medical Discovery," Dr. Roberts Bartholow, of Jefferson Medical College, says: "Very useful as a stomachic (stomach) tonic and in atomic dyspepsia. Cures gastric (stomach) catarrh and headache accompanying same."

Dr. Grover Coe, of New York, says: "Hydrastis (Golden Seal root) exercises an especial influence over mucous surfaces. Upon the liver it acts with equal certainty and efficacy." As a cholagogue (liver invigorator) it has few equals. Dr. Coe also advises it for affections of the spleen and other abdominal viscera generally, and for scrofulous and glandular diseases, cutaneous eruptions, indigestion, debility, chronic diarrhea, constipation, also in several affections peculiar to women, and in all chronic derangements of the liver, also for chronic inflammation of bladder, for which Dr. Coe says "it is one of the most reliable agents of cure."

Prof. John King, M. D., late of Cincinnati, author of the AMERICAN DISPENSATORY, gives it a prominent place among medicinal agents, reiterates all the foregoing writers have said about it, as does also Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati. Dr. Scudder says: "It stimulates the digestive processes and increases the assimilation of food. By these means the blood is enriched.  the consequent improvement of the glandular and nervous systems are natural results." Dr. Scudder further says, "in relation to its general effect upon the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic, useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says of Golden Seal root: "It is a most superior remedy in catarrhal gastritis (inflammation of the stomach), chronic constipation, general debility, in convalescence from protracted fevers, in prostrating night-sweats. It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb." This agent, Golden Seal root, is an important ingredient of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for woman's weaknesses, as well as of the "Golden Medical Discovery." Dr. Ellingwood continues, "in all catarrhal conditions it is useful."

Much more, did space permit, could be quoted from prominent authorities as to the wonderful curative properties possessed by Golden Seal root.

We want to assure the reader that "Golden Medical Discovery" can be relied upon to do all that is claimed for Golden Seal root in the cure of all the various diseases as set forth in the above brief extracts, for its most prominent and important ingredient is Golden Seal root. This agent is, however, strongly reinforced, and its curative action greatly enhanced by the addition, in just the right proportion of Queen's root, Stone root, Black Cherry bark, Bloodroot, Mandrake root and chemically pure glycerine. All of these are happily and harmoniously blended into a most perfect pharmaceutical compound, now favorably known throughout most of the civilized countries of the world. Bear in mind that each and every ingredient entering into the "Discovery" has received the endorsement of the leading medical men of our land, who extol each article named above in the highest terms.

What other medicine put up for sale through druggists can show any such professional endorsement? For dyspepsia, liver troubles, all chronic catarrhal affections of whatever name or nature, lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, the "Discovery" can be relied upon as a sovereign remedy.

A little book of extracts treating of all the several ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines, being extracts from standard medical works, of the different schools of practice will be mailed free to any one asking (by postal card or letter), for the same, addressed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and giving the writer's full post-office address plainly written.

TRIBUTES TO PROCTOR

Reforms Effected by Late Senator as War Secretary.

ABOLISHED SUTLER'S STORES

Welfare of the Enlisted Men Near to His Heart—Food and Quarters of Soldiers Improved—Held in Tender Memory by Veterans.

It is no longer the custom in Washington to drap the department buildings with mourning when a chief official dies or when some former chief official dies. The war department showed no black after the death of Senator Redfield Proctor, ex-secretary of war, of Vermont was announced, but if there was no exterior symbol of grief there was grief within the building, for Mr. Proctor did much for the service.

In the civil war time Redfield Proctor was a soldier. He served on the staff of General William F. ("Baldy") Smith, and later he was colonel of the Fifteenth Vermont infantry. The enlisted man and his welfare were close to the Vermonter's heart, says a Washington correspondent of the New York Post, and while he was secretary of war under Harrison he succeeded in bringing about reforms in the service which ought to have been brought about long before.

When Redfield Proctor went into Harrison's cabinet, there were what were known as sutlers' stores at the recruiting rendezvous of the country. An old army man who speaks from personal knowledge of the conditions on Davids island, New York harbor, at the time says that the recruit who came to Davids island was practically compelled to buy certain parts of his equipment at the sutler's. It made no difference that some soldier, leaving for his post, was willing to turn over some of his supplies to the recruit—the recruit had to buy or it was intimated to him plainly that he must buy cleaning material, button sticks and half a dozen other things of the man who sold them as a side line to the selling of beer.

The result was that the recruit many a time spent money for things he did not need, and the sutler waxed wealthy. The sutler sold beer, and there was no restriction placed on the amount that he was allowed to sell to each man. On pay days the sutler's store at Davids island was a sight. In that day there were few restrictions placed on enlistments, and as long as a man was physically qualified for the service he was taken in with few questions about his antecedents. Within two hours after the men were paid off at Davids island the barroom in the sutler's establishment was filled with men drunk to the fighting point. Then the sutler, wholly responsible for the condition of things, howled for the guard, and a corporal and two or three privates would rush to the place to clean it out. As a result of the desire of the sutler to make money quick forty-two men were placed in the guardhouse on one day in the winter of 1888.

Mr. Proctor went into Harrison's cabinet as war secretary, and reforms began. The sutler's store, with its unlimited beer, went the way of all things bad, and the canteen, with its limited beer and the provision that all profits should go to the improvement of the soldiers' mess, took its place. Restrictions were placed upon enlistment. Liverpool wharf rats and the deserters from foreign services were barred from enlisting. Food improved, and there was the beginning of the vast improvement of the quarters for the soldiers.

Secretary Proctor took a personal interest in the conditions of life of the enlisted men. When he went to a post he was not content with a review of the troops. He went in the barracks, he asked questions, he tasted the food and he acquired a lot of information which he afterward put to use. The men liked him, and they showed that they liked him. Some of the older officers doubtless thought that the soldier with good food and comfortable quarters would be turned speedily into a mollycoddle, but nothing of the kind happened. It was found that the addition of a ration of vegetables to the soldier's dietary did not make him flee from before the face of the enemy and that the fact that he was given more liberty between retreat parade and taps did not make of him a less steady marksman on the range. The old soldiers hold Redfield Proctor in tender memory.

The United States senate has passed a bill giving Major General O. O. Howard, retired, the rank of lieutenant general, a rank that ought to have been given him years ago. Howard never asked congress for the promotion, and he never asked a friend to ask it for him. He was perfectly content apparently to see other men less deserving go on the retired list with the ranks which should have been his. One of the last acts in life of Redfield Proctor was to prepare and introduce a bill for the promotion of General Howard. Proctor did it voluntarily, and he succeeded in getting the senate to pass it. It seems probable that sentiment will move the house to approve of the last measure which the senator introduced into the upper house.

It was always Secretary Proctor's belief that a large part of the credit for the proper deploying and placing of the Union troops at Gettysburg belonged to General Howard. If he dies a lieutenant general the fact will be due to the work on his behalf done voluntarily by the senator from Vermont over whose soldier body taps were recently sounded.

(Contributed)

Arlington, Indiana, March 30.—Prosperity and success with wealth that enables him to be able to write his check with five figures, has come to one of our Arlington boys. Ira Allenthorpe writes that he has just completed a trade by which he has bought for his wife and she now holds a deed for the same, to the "Famous Freeman Orchard, of Indiana," the largest in the State, and adjoining farms with the noted farm of the Indiana poet, James Whitcomb Riley. This farm consists of 100 acres of fruit and has the finest buildings of any farm in the county. Ira paid $10,000 cash for the farm and now the croakers who said he was foolish to leave the farm south of Arlington, and go to work for some good business men, can kick themselves, and wish they were in his place.

The people who were ready to give him a kick when he was poor and send him down hill faster than he was going, can now think, and no doubt they will be ready to praise him for his ability. All his true friends will be delighted to hear of his wonderful success. We most heartily congratulate Ira on his success and wish him continued prosperity. We are certain his Rushville and Rush county friends will be rejoiced to hear this news.

When we first entered into the manufacturing of Raymond Chicken Lice Powder we were not sure that it would be a go, there were so many different powders on the market that we were uncertain as to finding a sale for ours. Our first idea was what has made ours such a wonderful seller, we knew that so many lice powders were carried for such a long time that they lost their strength, and we thought that to make our own, make it fresh every week and give a customer a full pound package for 15c instead of 12 to 14 ounces for 25c as other manufacturers are doing that we would get the business. Sure enough we were right and are now selling several hundred pounds each year of our lice powder. If you have never used ours, better try it next time.
